To believe in one GOD, all powerful, sovereignly just and good;

In the soul, its immortality and its preexistence as the justification for the present life;

In the plurality of existences as the mechanism of moral and intellectual improvement, reparation and atonement;

In the perfectibility of the most imperfect beings;

In the ever increasing happiness with perfection;

In the equitable reward of good and evil upon to the principle: each one will be recompensed according to his works;

In the impartial justice for all with no benefit, privilege or exception to any creature;

In man's free-will which enable him the choice between good and evil;

In the continuity of the relations between the visible and invisible worlds;

In the fraternity that binds all past, present and future beings incarnate and discarnate;

To sustaining that life on Earth is a provisional stage of the spirit's life which is eternal;

To bravely accept life's tests, since the future is more desirable than the present;

To practice CHARITY by thoughts, words and works in the broadest meaning of the term;

To strive for becoming each day better than the day before, pulling out imperfection from the soul;

To submit all beliefs to the review of reason and free examination, so as to nothing blindly accept;

To respect all sincere creeds no matter how irrational they seem;

Do not violate anyone's consciousness;

To recognize the unfolding of Nature's laws which are God laws in the discoveries of Science.

Such is the creed, the religion of Spiritism, a religion that reconciles with all others, that is, with all ways to worship God. This is the bond which will unite all Spiritists in a holy communion of thoughts, while one hopes it will unite all men under the banner of universal fraternity.
