F. If amending or adding additional Articles, enter change(s) here:
(Attach additional sheets, if necessary). (Be specific)

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This involves a thorough review of the available information and a clear definition of the issue at hand.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to gather relevant data. This can be done through various methods, including interviews, surveys, and document analysis.

3. After gathering the data, the next step is to analyze it. This involves looking for patterns, trends, and anomalies that may be related to the problem.

4. Once the data has been analyzed, the next step is to develop a hypothesis. This is a tentative explanation for the problem that can be tested through further investigation.

5. The final step in the process is to test the hypothesis. This can be done through experiments, observations, or other methods that allow for the collection of new data.

6. Once the hypothesis has been tested, the next step is to draw conclusions. This involves summarizing the findings of the investigation and determining whether the hypothesis was supported or refuted.

7. Finally, the results of the investigation should be communicated to the relevant parties. This can be done through a report, presentation, or other means of communication.

P. If an amendment provides for an exchange, reclassification, or cancellation of issued shares, provisions for implementing the amendment if not contained in the amendment itself:
(if not applicable, indicate N/A)

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is to identify the problem.	2. The second step is to gather information about the problem.	3. The third step is to analyze the information and identify the causes of the problem.	4. The fourth step is to develop a plan of action to solve the problem.	5. The fifth step is to implement the plan and monitor the results.
6. The sixth step is to evaluate the results and determine if the problem has been solved.	7. The seventh step is to document the findings and conclusions of the investigation.	8. The eighth step is to communicate the results to the appropriate parties.	9. The ninth step is to review the process and make any necessary improvements.	10. The tenth step is to close the investigation and report the final results.
