Marble Restoration

This case study is a job we did in a large condominium in a very upscale water front neighborhood. We had previously FLATTENED this floor and restored it to a better than new condition. But because there was an unavoidable change in building management, the floors had not been maintained like we had recommended them to be. This job should have been a regular maintenance job but, due to the lack of proper maintenance, the the floor surface needed some light moderate restoration work instead. These are some before and after pictures.

These pictures are taken looking across the elevators (right), looking out the front doors. Notice how the 1st picture is badly distorted and does not show good shine or clarity in the traffic areas; mainly along the right wall and in front of the far elevator car.

These two areas are right in side the main doors. (It is a good example of what can happen to a stone floor when it is not maintained properly and when floor mats are allowed to be left on the floor, not regularly cleaned under and allowed to properly air dry.)
