IRENE's internet access is being provided to this community as part of a grant from the National Telecommunications and Information Administration in the U.S. Department of Commerce.

At a time when communications between ordinary citizens has been all but drowned out by the barrage of mass media, online communication has become the last bastion of real citizen deliberation and has become the "public square" so to speak of the nation.

INTRODUCTION

This guidebook was created to explain what the Internet is, how IRENE is plugged into it, and how you can use it. We'll take the approach that you are brand new to the Internet or have very little experience with it.

The Internet today is growing with astonishing speed, becoming a new center for business, a powerful educational tool, and a broad source of entertainment. As you tour the main features of the Internet, you'll quickly see how it will change our lives, make our work easier and help us communicate in new ways.

You'll be seeing many new and unfamiliar terms as we go along, but we promise they won't bite. Whenever you encounter these in your path, we'll point you to additional reference materials or other parts of this guidebook for help. This way, if you already know about a particular topic, you can continue, if not, you'll know where to find answers to your questions.

Sometimes people feel overwhelmed when they begin learning how to use the Internet. They beat up on themselves and feel stupid. Don't. You can get help and answers on IRENE. Just go online and ask. You'll also find helpful programs and documents that can show and explain more about the Internet.

In a very real sense, the Internet access feature of IRENE can bring the world to your desktop. You'll be learning a lot, so pace yourself and remember that a little patience will go a long way. You'll be rewarded with the ability to hop, skip and jump around the globe from your desk, tapping into a vast, worldwide network that's more fun and educational than anything you'll find on TV.
