ARTICLE III: PREAMBLE (PURPOSE)

The African-American Cultural Society of Central Florida (AACS) developed out of the need to unite "African-minded" individuals in Central Florida community. In the 1800s W.E.B. DuBois wrote of a "talented-tenth." DuBois called these educators and craftsmen the best of the African-American population. He commissioned them to do whatever in their power to bring their brothers and sisters up as they ascended the ladder of success. This almost 200-year-old charge has brought together local professional African-Americans, who are concentrating their efforts to make a cultural impact in Central Florida.

Section 1. Goals

As Orlando and its surrounding communities continue to grow there is a desperate need for those who have escaped their invisible chains to raise the awareness of those still awaiting liberation.
