WHY WE DO WHAT WE DO

Missionary Pilots fulfill the Great Commission by making disciples in their own circles of influence as well as supporting other missionary workers. They come alongside those in the field and provide life-saving transportation and supply delivery. They also assist missionaries and others by reducing travel time over rugged terrain and to remote locations. Ultimately, these pilots deliver hope through the Gospel of Jesus Christ to impoverished and unreached peoples.

Program rotations begin in January and July. After approximately eight quarters, students will complete coursework for a Bachelor's Degree in Missions with a concentration in Missionary Aviation. Additionally, our students will complete the requirements for their Private, Instrument, and Commercial Pilot Licenses, including 250 hours of flight time, Missionary Flying courses, and a Mission Trip Practicum.

OUR VISION

To provide high school graduates or equivalency with streamlined professional and economical education and training that meets the requirements of missions organizations and the Federal Aviation Administration with a balanced focus on safety, professional standards, and missions orientation.

COLLEGE OF MISSIONARY AVIATION

FAA

Why Missionary Aviation?

Missionary pilots are important because they are often essential in providing life-saving transportation and supplies in the mission field. They assist missionaries by reducing travel time across rugged terrain and ultimately deliver hope to impoverished countries. When people see the aircraft arriving, they know help is on the way.

A Future of Flying Higher

Qualified pilots from the college may begin to fly missionary flights to the Bahamas, Haiti and the Dominican Republic as well as other islands. They will gain flight experience and work as apprentices fulfilling their requirements for the A & P license needed by many missionary organizations.
