11. The Commission of the European Communities (CEC) has been instrumental in the development of the European Community (EC) and the European Union (EU). The CEC was established in 1957 as the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) and later expanded to include the European Atomic Energy Community (EAEC) and the European Economic Community (EEC). The ECSC was the first of the three communities and was designed to promote economic cooperation and integration among its member states. The EAEC was established in 1958 and was designed to promote the development of nuclear energy. The EEC was established in 1958 and was designed to promote economic integration and the free movement of goods, services, and people. The three communities were merged into a single entity, the European Community, in 1993. The EC was the predecessor of the EU, which was established in 1993. The EU is a political and economic union of member states that are bound together by a common set of rules and regulations. The EU has a common currency, the Euro, and a common foreign and security policy. The EU is also a major player in international relations and has a significant impact on the world economy.
