Greenlink empowers cities, states, and organizations to eliminate carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions through data-driven strategies that transition from fossil fuels to clean energy solutions. We support the equitable implementation of these plans, ensuring that all communities thrive in a more sustainable future. Greenlink saw that communities were seeking higher levels of data resolution and needed more useful interpretation of the data in order to make better, more informed decisions regarding energy. Greenlink also recognized that equity was often not being centered as a core component of policy building because communities lacked the data to support the necessary community engagement. With this in mind, Greenlink Analytics was founded to bring scientific research and analysis to communities so that leaders and stakeholders at the local level could create real impact. The idea was to bring accurate, high-resolution data and its interpretation to communities in order to allow them to make informed decisions about their communities that will bring positive outcomes today and for generations to come.
