Title

Section 215.26, Florida Statutes, states in part: "Applications or claims are provided in this section shall be filed with the Comptroller, except as otherwise provided herein, within three years after the right to such refund has become due; otherwise such right shall be barred." Three is generally interpreted meaning three years from the date of payment of the tax into the State treasury. The Comptroller has delegated the authority to accept applications for refunds of the use of state government which initially collected the money.
