the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. This will put pressure on the environment and on the world's resources.

One way to deal with this problem is to increase the efficiency of food production. This can be done by using better farming techniques and by using more land.

Another way to deal with this problem is to reduce the amount of food that is wasted. This can be done by using food more efficiently and by reducing the amount of food that is thrown away.

There are many other ways to deal with this problem. The important thing is to find a way to deal with it that will not harm the environment or the world's resources.

One of the most important things we can do is to educate people about the problem. If people know more about the problem, they will be more likely to do something to help.

There are many other things we can do to help. We can support organizations that are working to solve the problem. We can also try to change our own behavior.

It is important to remember that we all have a role to play in solving this problem. If we all do our part, we can make a difference.
