1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand the current market landscape, identify gaps, and determine the target audience. Once a market need is identified, the next step is to develop a concept that addresses this need. This concept should be innovative, feasible, and profitable. The concept is then refined through a series of iterations, involving prototyping and testing with potential customers. Once the concept is finalized, the next step is to develop a business plan. This plan outlines the financial aspects of the product, including the cost of production, the pricing strategy, and the revenue projections. The business plan is then used to secure funding from investors or lenders. Finally, the product is manufactured and distributed to the market. The entire process is a continuous cycle, with feedback from customers and the market being used to refine and improve the product over time.

If the record specifies a delayed effective date, but not an effective time, at 12.01 a.m. on the earlier of: (b) The 90th day after the record is filed.
