Introduction

The PACT (Positive Adolescent Choices Training) Foundation

Interpersonal violence has a dramatic impact on the health of American youths. Homicides, the most salient and easily measured impact, account for one of every five deaths among youths, ages fifteen to twenty-four and 58 per cent of deaths among black males ages fifteen to nineteen.ⁱ From 1985 through 1990 firearm homicide rates increased 141 per cent for all fifteen-to-nineteen-year-olds and nearly tripled among black males in this age groupⁱⁱ This violence prevention program, designed specifically for African American, and other minority adolescents, applies cognitive training methods in small-group settings (ten to fifteen youths) in six skill areas; Giving positive feedback, Giving negative feedback, Accepting negative feedback, Resisting peer pressure, Solving problems, and Negotiating.

Middle school teachers select students for participation based on social-skill deficiencies, problems with aggressive behavior, or history of victimization. Training is provided twice a week in fifty-minute sessions for half of the school year. PACT volunteers will facilitate the training and are aided by a high-quality videotape that demonstrates the skills in realistic situations.

Students are given ample time to model and practice the skill. An incentive system is used to reward active participation and appropriate behavior during training. "Success dollars" are given that can be exchanged for such items as cassette tapes and t-shirts.

For further information on how we can bring PACT to your school-based or community-based program, please call Reverend James R. Gibbs, Jr. at 850-576-4642 at home or 850-228-1294 cellular. Our e-mail is jimrgibbs@comcast.net
