To Whom It May Concern:

Recently we were in receipt of a Notice of Administrative Dissolution of Revocation. Upon calling your office I was instructed to write you a letter describing as to why we feel this might have possibly happened.

As I am sure everyone says, "We sent out a check I don't know what happened" in this case I was shocked to receive your notice. I did in fact send out a check in the appropriate amount on January 19, 2001. But after doing some research I think I found out what happened.

I did in fact send out a check, please see enclosed copies, but that check was drawn on a personal account. At that time we had not received our corporations checks yet. I did not elect to have the Certificate of Status sent, as I should have resulting in my first mistake. I simply filed your invoice away without another thought.

My second mistake was when I noticed that your check had not cleared that I did not make a call. The reason I was not concerned is that I have had several checks to the government, both state and federal, that has taken as long as 9 months to clear.

When I called the hotline they mentioned something about a second notice or maybe the lady I talked with did. In all honesty we never received a second notice.

I have worried and worried and worried about this since I got your notice. I was afraid to write this because I was afraid of your answer. But I finally realized that delaying was not going to make things any better. It was an honest good faith mistake on my part and I cannot explain as to why my application and fee never made it your office.

Having to pay that huge fee would be really tough. Things have been slowing down in the last month. Could you please make an exception for us this once? We are getting an accountant to help with all future financial matters so I feel certain that we will be able to avoid any additional mishaps.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Regards,

Tracy A. Parrish
