Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a hospital. The sample consisted of 100 nurses from the Intensive Care Unit (ICU) and 100 nurses from the General Ward. A questionnaire was distributed to all participants, which included information about sociodemographic characteristics, work conditions, and musculoskeletal symptoms. Data analysis was performed using chi-square tests. Results showed that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among ICU nurses than among General Ward nurses. The most prevalent disorder was low back pain, followed by neck pain and shoulder pain. The results suggest that nurses working in the ICU are at a higher risk of developing musculoskeletal disorders compared to those working in the General Ward.
