 Subject: Annual report filing

I am writing in regard to my annual report filing - document #P01000097724 for Drywall Experts, Inc.

I have recently found out that I should have received a first notice that would have enabled me to file prior to the due date. What I did receive stated that I had to pay $550.00 for the filing. When I finally went to see an accountant about this, he notified me that I should have received a first notice that would have cost me $150.00 for the filing. He told me to notify your department of not having received the first notice so that I could get the late fee removed since I never received the first notice. Before I could contact you, I received another notice that states that the corporation was dissolved on October 4th and that it now would cost me $750.00 to have the corporation become active again.

Since this is the first year that my corporation is active and that I did not receive the first notice as my accountant says I should have, can you waive some of these fees as this amount due has become outrageous? I would really appreciate any help that you can give me on this as I want to continue to operate under the name of this corporation but am finding it hard to allocate this kind of money for an error that I feel is not mine to begin with.

Please let me know if these fees can be waived. Thank you for your time.
