To Whom it May concern,

I just received notice on my corporate papers, I called to see what I needed to do to handle these papers. This is the first notice I received and it states they were due September 10, 2003. This is my first year in business so I did not expect the papers or I would have looked for them. This is not the first time I have not received my mail for the company I also miss letters and checks. When our mailman goes on vacation I really do not know what happens I used to assume it went back to the sender but I really don't know. Since this started happening I now have a PO Box to insure I receive all my mail.

What I am asking is if the penalty could be waived or can I make payments, I really want to keep this corporation and I will always follow up on everything in the future years to come. I mean once I find out when the papers are originally due.

Thank you for your consideration.
