strategic competition with many other corporations, if firms or corporations are able to collaborate, it will lead to better results. In the case of strategic cooperation, a part of the market is controlled by a few companies, so it is easier for them to make decisions together, and they can work more effectively. This kind of cooperation is not always welcomed by other companies, if firms or corporations are not able to work together, it may become difficult for them to compete. Strategic cooperation is a strategy of competing with the corporation if it is beneficial for all involved firms; strategic cooperation is a competition in which firms try to gain market share.
