E. If amending or adding additional Articles, enter change(s) here:

(Attach additional sheets, if necessary). (Be specific)

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand the preferences and behaviors of potential customers. Once a need is identified, the next step is to develop a concept that addresses this need. This concept should be unique and offer a clear value proposition to the target market.

2. After developing a concept, the next step is to create a prototype. A prototype is a preliminary model of the product that allows the development team to test and refine their ideas. This can be done through various methods, such as 3D printing, computer-aided design (CAD), or even building a physical model using materials like cardboard or wood. The prototype is used to gather feedback from potential users and make necessary adjustments to the design.

3. Once a prototype is developed, the next step is to conduct a feasibility study. This study evaluates the technical, financial, and market viability of the product. It involves assessing the resources required for production, the potential costs, and the competitive landscape. The feasibility study helps the development team make informed decisions about whether to proceed with the product and what resources will be needed.

4. The final step in the process is to launch the product. This involves creating a marketing plan to promote the product and reach the target market. The marketing plan should include strategies for distribution, pricing, and promotion. Once the product is launched, the development team should continue to monitor its performance and gather feedback from customers to make improvements and ensure long-term success.

F. If an amendment provides for an exchange, reclassification, or cancellation of issued shares, provisions for implementing the amendment if not contained in the amendment itself:

(if not applicable, indicate N/A)
