14. The following table shows the number of persons who were employed in the various occupations in the United States in 1900 and 1910. The occupations are grouped into three main classes: Agriculture, Manufacturing, and Services. The table shows that the number of persons employed in agriculture decreased from 1900 to 1910, while the number of persons employed in manufacturing and services increased. This is due to the fact that the population of the United States increased during this period, and the demand for manufactured goods and services increased. The table also shows that the number of persons employed in agriculture decreased as a percentage of the total population, while the number of persons employed in manufacturing and services increased as a percentage of the total population. This is due to the fact that the population of the United States increased during this period, and the demand for manufactured goods and services increased.
