The element p_{max} is called the maximal element of $\mathcal{P}$. The element $p_{\text{min}} \in \mathcal{P}_{\text{min}}$ is called the minimal element of $\mathcal{P}$. There is a large literature on the appropriate design and use of expert systems in the diagnosis of faults in complex systems. The design of expert systems for fault diagnosis is a problem that is addressed in the survey paper by the authors of the appropriate design of expert-based agents and agents for use as their own agents. In that paper, the authors compare the design of expert-based agents with the design of agents that use the appropriate design of expert-based agents. The authors of the appropriate design of expert-based agents and agents for use as their own agents also discuss the design of expert-based agents and agents for use as their own agents.
