Dear Sirs:

There has been one colossal fiasco that I need to plead your indulgence in correcting. While I am certain that the first notice of my annual report was mailed from your offices, I did not receive it. As the solitary employee of my corporation, I am the one who would have received and processed it.

I realize that it is my responsibility to be sure that an annual report is filed. I am a artisan and, to put it mildly, bookkeeping is not my forte. I assumed that for anything that needed to be filed, I would receive a notice. That did not, obviously, take into account potential problems and was a mistake on my part.

I am pleading to have the $400 penalty suspended in this case. Please accept my contrite promise to note next year's report on my calendar to be sure that it is filed. At this point in time, $400 would be a major financial blow to the company - I am attempting to prepare for a major show to help my company gain clients. Every penny earned has been reinvested in growing the company.

I would appreciate your help in this matter.

Sincerely,

Christina D Shipman
