April 30, 2004

Dear Sir/Madam,

199803054618

I have enclosed my Corporate annual report fee for 2004 and 2003. I understand my corporation has been dissolved by the State for not filing last year. This was news to me until two days ago when I pulled up the information on your website.

I assumed my accountant (now fired) had taken care of this last year. What contributed to my confusion on this matter was the fact that the address you have listed for me is a property (home) I still own, but have rented since December of 2002. Evidently when your notice about the filing fee came it was not forwarded to my new mailing address. I did not receive the notice or I would have realized my accountant failed to send in the fee and I would have personally done it.

I have a full time "regular job" and have my S Corp for the work I do at home creating and editing training manuals for medical offices. My annual revenue is only about $10,000 a year but it's better than no dollars, and I enjoy doing it in my spare time.

I hope you will take the above into consideration and forego the "reinstatement fee" for my corporation. I have rented a permanent "mail box" to use as my business mailing address to avoid problems like this in the future. I would grovel but I don't know if would have the right effect.

Sincerely,

William B. Halverson
