ARTICLE XIII - RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSFERABILITY OF STOCK:

In order for any shareholder to sell or otherwise dispose of his stock, he must first offer to sell the stock back to the corporation. After a period of (15) days, during which time the selling stockholder has continually offered to sell his stock or any percentage thereof to the corporation, and such offer is not accepted by majority vote of the Board of Directors, then he may terminate his offer to the corporation.

In the event the corporation does not accept the offer within the (15) day period mentioned above, and the offering party is still desirous of selling his stock, he must then offer to sell, in portions which bear a direct proportional amount as to each stockholder's respective ownership of stock, the stock to all other stockholders. After a period of (30) days, during which time the selling stockholder has continually offered the sale of his stock to the other stockholders as required above, the selling stockholder may terminate the continuing offer and otherwise dispose of his respective shares as he may deem fit and proper.

If, in the event the offering stockholder cannot come to an agreement with the offerees as to a fair market value or price for the shares of stock being offered for sale, then in that event a board of arbitration shall be set up to determine the selling price of the shares.

The board of arbitration shall be composed of (3) members and their decision as to selling price of the shares shall be binding upon both the offeror and the offerees.

The board of arbitration members shall consist of (1) member selected by the offeror, (1) member selected by the offerees jointly, and the third member shall be selected by a majority vote of a committee composed of the (2) then existing members of the board of arbitration. The board of arbitration shall be appointed and set up within (10) days after the offer has been rejected by the offerees; and further, the determination as to the selling price shall be made within (15) days after the board of arbitration has been established.

In the event the selling price as established by the board of arbitration is not acceptable to the offeror and he elects not to sell his stock in the corporation at the determined price, then the offeror cannot transfer or convey his shares for a period of (6) months following the date when the determination by the board of arbitration has been handed down. At the conclusion of the (6) month period, if the offeror determines to again offer his shares or any part thereof for sale, then the procedures and restrictions on transferability shall recommence.

The board of arbitration, in determining a selling price for the stock, shall consider all factors pertinent to the valuation of the stock, but in no event shall the price as determined by the board of arbitration be less than an amount offered by a third party for the stock, which said amount has been tendered in escrow to the board of arbitration by any third party.

In the event the selling price as established by the board of arbitration is acceptable to the offeror and not acceptable to the offerees, then the offeror is free to sell his shares of stock to any third party or parties who will pay the selling price as determined by the board of arbitration.

In the event the (30) day period, during which time the continuing offer is required to remain in effect as set forth above, the offerees accept the offer to sell, then in that event that (30) day period shall no longer apply. Following the acceptance by the offerees, the offeror and the offerees shall agree upon a sale price within (15) days of the acceptance, and in the event such agreement cannot be reached, the procedure outlined above for the establishment of the board of arbitration shall commence immediately.

In the event the offeror has continued in his offer to sell, and in the due course of time the procedure outlined above has been completed, including that portion which recommences the arbitration procedure a second time, and no sale transaction has been completed, then in that event the offeror is free to transfer and convey his shares of stock to any third party provided, and at no time shall the offeror transfer or convey his shares of stock for a price less than that amount which the offerees have agreed to accept.

This Article is binding upon all shareholders, present and future, their heirs, assigns, legatees and devisees.
