Re: THOMAS E. COMBS CONSULTING, INC.

It has just been brought to my attention that the above referenced corporation did not file its Annual Corporate Renewal for 2002 and was administratively dissolved on October 4, 2002.

Enclosed you will find the "Application for Reinstatement" for my corporation and a check in the amount of $150.00 to cover this year's renewal. I am asking that the penalty for 2002 be abated due to extenuating circumstances. My business involves much traveling. It is my wife's habit to put any "important looking" papers in a box for me to sort through and take to the accountants or lawyer. Not really knowing what the UBR was I took the original renewal form to the lawyer's office. His message to me to send in the form never reached me as I was once again traveling with my consulting business. When the dissolution form arrived I took it to my accountant's office and she apprised me to write this letter of explanation to have the corporation reinstated.

As you can see from your records, this corporation has always renewed timely. The lapse of renewal was not done purposely and will certainly never happen again.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Tom Combs", is written over a horizontal line.

Thomas E. Combs
