Dear Ms. Harris:

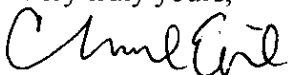

I'm writing regarding the reinstatement of my company, BackBone High Tech Public Relations, Inc. (BBI). Much to my surprise, I was notified just today via mail ("document P9900009986") that BBI was dissolved as an "active" Florida corporation. I've enclosed the $150 for our annual report and supplemental fee. If I may, I'd like to take just a moment to explain the extenuating and unique circumstances that prohibited us from filing an annual report within the time required.

I have spent the past six months travelling, spending a large part of that time in California, working toward two goals. The first was to develop and finalize a partnership with a marketing services firm that will enable BackBone to weather the current economic downturn and begin its third year as a FL-based company on firm footing. The second goal was to meet with contacts in the Silicon Valley technology and venture capital community as part of BackBone's participation in a "coast-to-coast" partnership and fundraising drive initiated on behalf of the Internet Coast, a South Florida organization devoted to the development of emerging technology companies in this region.

In that time, I've had mail periodically forwarded to my California address. Regrettably, the annual report form never reached me and given the all-consuming nature of our efforts to keep BackBone viable as a Florida company and meet the goals expressed above, I would think it understandable that I didn't take proactive steps to contact your office and inquire of its status. We are still at a very critical stage in our business, particularly given the continued economic difficulties in the tech sector (our market); carefully husbanding our resources is critical to our survival. I am hopeful you will take this all into account and see your way clear to reinstate BackBone as a Florida Corporation, and waive the $600 fee given these unique circumstances. We will make sure that from this point forward all forms from your office are addressed expeditiously.

Thank you for your time and consideration. We look forward to a prosperous, bright future both for BackBone and for the Florida business community.

Very truly yours,

Charles Epstein
President
BackBone Inc.
