Provides a stream-lined portal for the delivery of legal services to members of the public and businesses who are either the subject of a cease and desist letter, demanding that they turn over a domain owned by them, or a defendant in an Internet domain dispute. The domain is an electronic address on the Internet which is many times associated with a web site (sometimes called a web site address). Internet domain disputes typically arise when a trademark owner seeks to enforce his or her trademark rights and recover an Internet domain owned by another.

Defend Your Domain

Generally to prevail, the trademark owner must show use of the mark prior to the registrant's use on the Internet or in connection with some type of sale of goods or services. The trademark owner must also show some likelihood of confusion between the trademark and the domain subject to the dispute. On the other hand, the domain owner has rights if the domain is a generic term, is highly descriptive, is a geographic term or the domain owner is using the web site associated with the domain for news, criticism or commentary about the owner of the mark. The first commercial use of the domain or the mark often times determines the outcome. Defend My Domain - Defend Your Domain services enables the domain owner to (a) identify potential defenses; (b) gather data relevant to the defense; and, (c) retain the services of highly qualified lawyers of the firm Fleit, Kain, Gibbons, Gutman, Bongini & Bianco, P.L. to merge the facts supporting the defense with case law and present a well structured legal and factual argument supporting the ownership of the domain by the client. As with all legal services, we at Fleit, Kain, keep all your communications confidential and we run a conflicts check to avoid an appearance that we favor one client over another in any matter.

Defend My Trademark

These services are equally important in the Internet environment. Trademark owners may spend a significant number of years and money building a reputation with the public or segments of the business community who buy their goods or services. Trademark owners may have large advertising budgets to promote a mark and associate that mark with goods or services in the marketplace. Trademark rights arise when goods or services are sold in commercial settings with a mark that is unique or distinctive to the seller of the goods or services. Sophisticated trademark owners register their marks with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Other owners register their marks with state registrars. Sometimes, unauthorized persons buy domains that are identical or similar to the trademark and warehouse or not use the mark. Sometimes, these domain owners use the domain to sell similar goods or services. As a result, actual or prospective consumers or buyers search the Internet, see the similar domain and go to the domain owner's web site thinking it to be associated with the trademark owner

Defend Your Trademark

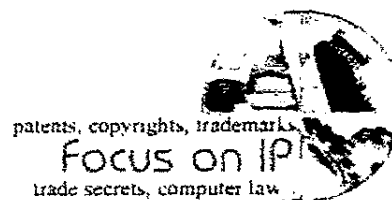

The trademark owners have a right to stop this confusion. The public has a right to be free of confusion. Enforcement of trademark rights may involve sending cease and desist letters, initiating ICANN Internet domain disputes, pursuing Federal court litigation, as well as preparatory trademark and sometimes copyright registrations.
