The Forum for Nonprofits: Countywide Concussion Care Inititative

May 29, 2013 No comments

Posted on April 20, 2013by Forum for Nonprofits

David Goldstein, a passionate soccer player at Ransom High School in Miami, suffered headaches, nausea and fatigue for months before finally learning that he suffered symptoms related to a concussion. More than 300,000 high school students like David suffer from sports-related concussions each year. Listen to find out how David transformed his experience into the Countywide Concussion Care Initiative, a program that helps increase awareness about how to prevent and treat concussions and provides a computer-based testing program to public schools in Miami-Dade County. The ImPACT Test is acomputer program that uses a baseline testing system to diagnose concussions. David's mother, Cheryl, also discusses her experience as a parent who didn't know the signs of a concussion or how to get her son help. She supports David in his drive to educate parents, coaches and players about the dangers of concussions. Find out how this initiative is spreading throughout South Floridaand how you can help. Call the University of Miami Sports Medicine Department at 305-689-5500, or visit the Countywide web site here. To listen to the program in a new window, click here: Countywide Concussion Care, 4/21/13

Welcome

Thank you for visiting Countywide Concussion Care. My name is David Goldstein. I am a volunteer of the KiDZ Neuroscience Center at the Miami Project to Cure Paralysis. I am also a spokesperson for the Brain Injury Association of Florida's statewide Mind Your Brain Campaign to raise public awareness about concussions and to push for passage of the sports concussion legislation. I am dedicated to improving awareness and treatment of concussions.

SOLVING THE CONCUSSION CRISIS: PRACTICAL SOLUTIONS

October 23, 2015 No comments

This white paper is an international collaborative effort to address concussion management, science, policy and future directions. This article is driven by data and rooted in science. There has been no sponsorship or financial interest influencing the development of this statement of agreement. This consensus statement will be constantly updated based on advances in science. These efforts aim to provide much needed direction for concussion management rendered by school boards, workers' compensation boards, amateur and professional sporting associations, as well as insurance providers and government. The aforementioned groups are encouraged to strive towards the best medical practices outlined in this white paper. Concussed individuals may reference this policy paper when advocating for care.
