Navigating COVID in the Library

Dave McMurrin, Assistant Library Director

Summer Reading is one of the busiest times of the year for the library, and this year produced unique challenges in delivering service to our citizens while continuing to improve early literacy. In addition, we planned to introduce a citywide reading challenge to encourage all citizens to read more for the summer.

Last year's summer reading involved in-person programming with large groups of kids and parents, targeted to specific developmental age groups. The large group programs were space-themed, which added excitement and focus to our programming. We had "Twinkle Babies," "Space Explorers," and "Zooming Toddlers" all participating in these groups.

This year's theme was Imagine Your Story and we definitely had to do some imagining. In an effort to give families at home the experience of visiting the library with our youth department, we made videos with songs, rhymes, book talks, and craft demonstrations. We made grab bags with the craft supplies so that families could watch the videos and make their own crafts at home. Grab bags were customized for babies, toddlers, preschoolers, K-2nd graders, 3rd-5th graders, tweens, and teens. Many bags also included a free book. Having books in a home is essential for early readers and we were excited to be able to offer that to our citizens. Families picked up the grab bags at our contact-free curbside pickup.

We used Beanstack, an online reading challenge product, again this year to track our citizen's engagement, but our reading activities and reading goals were online or things you could do at home. Previous challenges incorporated in-library activities, which wasn't an option this year. All reading activities this year offered raffle prizes, which we either mailed or allowed curbside pickup.

We also collaborated with the Communications and Marketing department to get our videos promoted on the City's YouTube channel and, with their help, created our own YouTube channel (bit.ly/bsplyoutube). The first week's promotional video was shared on social media over 50 times and was picked up on BayNews 9. We had very positive responses from families; they could see the familiar faces of our staff and many of our videos were watched over and over again.

We're building up video content that our citizens will always have access to as a tool for early literacy and creativity. This format of no-contact programming is viable for the future, enabling parents to have in-house songs, rhymes, book talks, and crafts demonstrations at any time. It also gives us new opportunities to reach citizens who have not yet had the chance to visit the library and who are new to our services.
