Anchor Brewing

2015 Christmas Ale

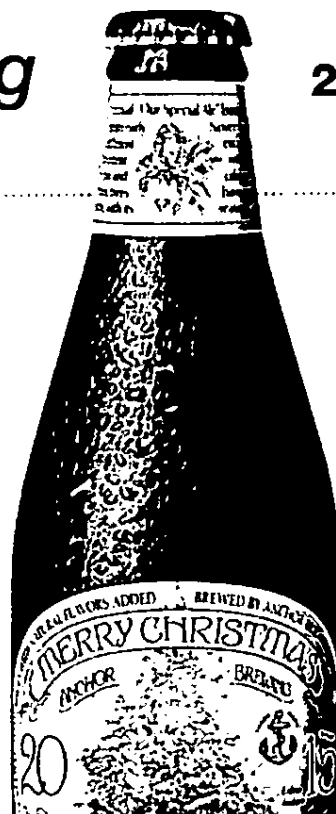

Every year for the last 40 years, Anchor Brewing has released a Christmas ale that is a liquid embodiment of the holiday spirit. This year, the 41st year, is no exception.

With a tradition as expected as Christmas itself, the San Francisco-based brewery known for their Steam Beer revises their Christmas Ale recipe. And though the ingredients are known only to the brewers themselves, this beer is always a dark, spiced ale with rich aromas and a balanced body.

As with the annually tweaked recipe, the tree on the label is also different every year, though drawn by the same, faithful artist. In years past, the label held such arboreal beauties as the Sequoia in 1979, the Douglas Fir in 1977, the Blue Birch in decorated. The tree is native to the Himalayas and common in many decorated San Franciscan homes, an easy choice for the Anchor team as they spotted the tree less than a block from the brewery's front door.

Celebrate the holidays and the New Year with a beer fit for the occasion. Made in the spirit of the season, Anchor Christmas Ale is as festive and decorative as it is delicious.
