Summary: Novavax, Inc., (NOX), located in Columbia, MD, is a bio-pharmaceutical drug delivery company that combines its proprietary and patented "patchless" transdermal delivery technologies with existing successful pharmaceutical applications. These products are expected to offer attractive therapy alternatives, shortened clinical trial times and more easily defined measurements of clinical efficacy. The Company is currently in pharmacokinetic dose ranging clinical trials coupling one of their delivery platforms with two hormonal replacement therapy (HRT) products which are among the world's largest selling drugs: natural human estrogen (Company name-ESTROSORB™) and testosterone (Company name-ANDROSORB™). Since the technologies lend themselves to most alcohol soluble compounds, other future reformulations may include: Naproxen, Erythromycin, Dilantin, Prozac, members of the "caine" family, morphine, nicotine and prostoglandins (including prostaglandin E-1 for treatment of male impotence.) We believe these delivery platforms have the potential to become a new generation of pharmaceutical conveyance. NOX is also developing proprietary pharmaceuticals, including Helicore™, an anti-bacterial non-antibiotic oral liquid to eradicate the H. pylori bacteria. H. pylori is a principal causative agent leading to peptic ulcers, gastritis and certain forms of stomach cancer. Helicore™ is currently in pharmacokinetic dose ranging clinical trials.

Recommendation: Based on 1) the existing multi-billion dollar markets for the Company's three announced products in clinical trials, 2) the competitive advantages shown to date in clinical trials for the two HRT's using one of the Company's proprietary delivery platforms, 3) the likelihood of a licensing agreement announcement for ESTROSORB™ within the next few months and for ANDROSORB™ in 1998 if a combination hormonal product agreement is not reached, 4) the high probability in our judgment of FDA approvals for NOX's hormonal replacement products, 5) the potential for other large market alcohol soluble products to be developed through the delivery platforms, 6) the apparent lack of hype surrounding the stock due to low institutional visibility and ownership in addition to there being no other current "Street" research coverage we know of, 7) the fact that a Company Director made a material
